

Jennifer Stavros is my name.

A Google search will result in finding me and the superhero I share the moniker with. Some might find this to be a coincidence. I don't.

My pen is my super power.

My strengths are:

finding ways to be creative as well as black and white, navigating outside of the box thinking while coloring inside the lines, researching to get to the root of the awesome, getting it all done in style

My arch nemesis are:

late hours that turn into mornings too easily, rigid lifeless text, the Oxford comma

With the powers of my pen I've written for a variety of clients including:

The LA Weekly, LAist, Herbalife, Preval, The KidnEwe, Media Temple, Mayer Dahan, Harrison & Rose, ChickLit, and more

My writing has the power to fly through expectations and shapeshift for both corporate and creative interest.

I harness the capabilities of a dynamic duo all in one heroic character juxtaposition.

I'm self-propelled but am collaboration friendly.

You can never have too many super friends to help save the day after all.

Depending on the desire, emotions felt from exposure to my writing include:

entertained, educated, enlightened, heart warmed, overjoyed, delighted, inspired

My goals are simple:

Embrace color and black and white in everyday settings. Engage and learn from all those other visionary superheroes all over the world. Leave pieces of my heart all over the internet. Compel others to find the inspiration within. Be a kickass mom. Save the world.
